Homework Starts with Home Information Session: The 2-Generation Approach

May 3, 2018

Meeting logistics

- This session is being recorded and may be posted publicly.
- We will leave time at the end for questions.
- Don't forget to sign out and get your guest parking validation before you leave.
- If joining remotely...
 - Please mute your line unless you are speaking. Webinar audio controls are orange when muted.
 - Please do not put your line on hold as this may trigger hold music.
 - We will not be monitoring the chat function.

A photograph of a woman and a young child in a kitchen. The woman, on the left, is wearing a white t-shirt and is leaning over the child, smiling as she pours from a white cylindrical container into a glass jar. The child, on the right, is wearing a pink long-sleeved shirt and is looking down at the jar. The background is a blurred kitchen setting. The word "Parent" is overlaid in white text on the woman's chest, and the word "Child" is overlaid in white text on the child's chest.

Two-Gen as a New Way to Do Business – Not a New Program

- It is an approach not necessarily a specific model
- It is not asking a single system or program to do it all
- It is putting the burden of alignment and coordination off of parents and onto programs, systems and policies
- BUT, it is about inviting families into the system design process
- Intentionally linking high-quality services is what makes two gen different

Food for thought as you plan

Where is our work currently on the continuum?

- Who might some partners be who can help us expand our thinking to the other side of the continuum and about what it would take for a more whole family approach?
- What logistics considerations arise when thinking about a whole family approach?
- What is our main, or entry point gear? What other gears might we think about focusing on and how can we factor those into our work through collaboration, program expansion, or some other method?
 - How might we be attentive to the gear(s) differently for parents and for children?
- Are the pieces of work along our Theory of Change are complementary, aligned, and mutually reinforcing for parents and children?

A photograph of a woman with long brown hair and a young girl with curly hair in a room. The woman is on the left, looking down at something in her hands. The girl is on the right, smiling and holding a blue and yellow striped fabric. In the background, a young boy in a red shirt is standing near a wooden structure. A large blue circle with white text is overlaid in the center. The room has wooden walls and a doorway in the background.

Example of Housing and 2-Gen:

HOST

Housing, Opportunity,
and Services Together

- Built from the lessons of MTO and HOPE VI
 - Outcomes from those interventions didn't permeate into ending poverty
 - Chicago, DC, New York, Portland

“improving housing and access to safer neighborhoods is simply not enough”

Example of Housing and 2-Gen:

HOST

Housing, Opportunity,
and Services Together

- Key Components:
 - Intensive case management with parents and children (1:30 families)
 - Targeting:
 - Poor physical and mental health
 - Low literacy
 - Educational attainment
 - Weak connections to labor force
 - Building in strategies to foster a sense of community among families, building collective efficacy

Food for thought as you plan

- How can we build trust with and between participating families?
- How might we be explicit in our planning for both parent and child in our practice model and how we define our outcomes?
- What are the ways we can use the authorities and flexibilities we have – especially thinking through the collaborative nature of the partnerships– to allow for a family-centered design in connecting to supports for “the gears”
